

Recession?

Who says that there is recession?
When people don't hesitate to spend on their obsession...

Who says there is recession in the market?
When people construct to their bungalow, a golden gate
And don't question the rate of food for their pet
And spend thousands on a 'date' found on the net
That's why at any expensive restaurant, one still has to wait

Who can complain that the market is very slack
When there's a premium for a BMW or a Jaguar black
When there's heavy rush at every opportunity to pack
& Getaway on holidays back-to-back

Who's cribbing, the goods' movement in the market is slowing?
Just count, each month, how much they are blowing
On make-ups, plastic surgery and face-glowing
On mistresses, golf courses and party-throwing

They pay less to their chauffeurs & maids
Yet they spend millions at jewellers on their fortunate jades
On funeral processions & on creating statues of the deads
Don't believe me, attend a wedding & count the present heads

They say that all the movies are going flop
Then why don't they drop the payments to the artists top
Or the singers or musicians or VJs featuring in pop?
Don't even count the 'settlement' amount to a Don, or a cop

They say they don't have money to pay premium for their insurance
Yet they bet (& lose) thousands on a cricketer's runs
And give donations for admissions for daughters & sons
Even their leaders waste funds on elections & victory processions
And don't challenge the budget for tonnes of arms & guns

Who says that there is recession?
When people don't hesitate to spend on their obsession

Unless everyone starts buying things, in cash or kind
The growth for itself, the economy won't find
For after all, recession is a state of mind
Ahead will go the optimists, leaving the pessimists behind!

Who says that there is recession?
When people don't hesitate to spend on their obsession...

-Prasad Sovani, USA, 2011